- WA Labor will ensure that METRONET jobs go to Western Australians first.

Perth's outer suburbs are experiencing massive growth. The population between Jindalee and Two Rocks is expected to grow to 56,000 by 2020.

The stations will be at Alkimos, Eglinton and Yanchep to service those rapidly growing areas. The new stations will also result in fewer cars on the roads around Joondalup, reducing congestion and improving the town centre's ambience.

The Barnett Government promised to complete the Yanchep extension by 2020. They have broken that promise.

WA Labor is planning for the Yanchep extension now. In a growing area like this, local families need quality, reliable public transport infrastructure, to connect them to places of work, entertainment and recreation. They need METRONET.

Under a McGowan Labor Government, METRONET will give thousands of extra commuters the opportunity to catch a train, taking thousands of cars off congested roads like the Mitchell Freeway and Wanneroo Road.

The Yanchep extension and METRONET will connect local families to destinations across and around the metropolitan area. Building METRONET will also create thousands of construction jobs and apprenticeships.
